MEXICO.

The following general sketch of this province we give our readers, from a belief, that every thing connected with this interesting country, most, at this moment, be an object of curiosity. The information is principally derived from the late splendid work of Humboldt, not yet, however, translated; a work which will immortalize the reputation of its author.

The population of the Intendancy of Mexico, in 1803, was 1,311,800. The extent of surface in square leagues was, 5,927—by which it will be seen, that there were 255 persons to a square league.

This Intendancy is situated under the torrid zone, and extends from 16° 34' to 21° 57' north latitude. Its greatest length is 136 and greatest breadth 92 leagues. More than two thirds of it are mountainous, in which are immense plains, elevated from 6,651 to 7,545 feet above the level of the ocean. The climate on the western coast, is burning and unhealthy. The elevation of the highest summit of the Nova de Sonora, the Pico del Fraile, is 15,156 feet. Six great roads cross the Cordillera which encloses the valley, the medium height of which is 9,842 feet above the level of the ocean. The city of Mexico, contrary to the received opinion, that it stands in the midst of a lake, is 14,768 feet from lake Tezcuco, and more than 29,527 feet from the lake of Chalco. This difference originates from a diminution of water of the lake Tezcuco.

The Spaniards hate every thing like a shade round towns and villages; and the beautiful valley of Tenochtitlan has, by stripping it of its forest, become dry and without vegetation. The want of vegetation exposes the soil to the action of the solar rays, and the humidity is quickly evaporated and dissolved in air. The new city of Mexico was built in 1524, which, requiring great quantities of timber for building, &c. they destroyed, and continue still to destroy, without replanting the trees that shaded and ornamented that beautiful valley. This has sensibly contributed to diminish the water. The lake of Tezcuco, which Cortes called an inland sea, receives much less water from filtration in the 16th century. The lake Tezcuco, one of the five lakes in the valley of Mexico, is impregnated with muriate and carbonate of soda.

The city of Mexico is among the finest cities in the world; the ground on which it stands is uniformly level; the streets are regular and broad; and its public places are spacious. The architecture is pure; the exterior of the houses is not loaded with ornaments; there are no wooden balconies and galleries to be seen; the ballustrades and gates are all of Basra iron, ornamented with bronze. The principal objects of curiosity are, 1st.—The Cathedral, a Gothic edifice.—2d. The treasury, from which, since the beginning of the 16th century, more than 6,500 millions in gold and silver, have been issued. 3d. The Convents. 4th. The Hospital, which maintains 1800 children and old people. 5th. The Academia, or prison. 6th. The School of Mines. 7th. Botanical Garden. 8th. University and Library. 9th. Academy of Fine Arts. There are very few remains of the ancient Mexican edifices to be discovered at present, Cortes having, as he says, been obliged to destroy every house in the city to enable him to subdue the Indians. There are some antiquities, however, in the bounds of the city of Mexico and its environs—these are, the ruins of the Mexican or Aztec dikes and aqueducts, the stage of the sacrifices, the great calendar monument, the colossal manuscripts or hieroglyphical pictures, painted on Agave paper, stag skins and cotton cloth. The only ancient monuments in the Mexican valley, are the remains of two pyramids, consecrated to the sun and moon. The first is 645 feet in length, and 171 feet high—the second, or pyramid of the moon, is 30 feet lower. The construction of these is said to go as far back as the 8th century. In the city of Mexico, there are 140,000 souls, of which 2,932 are devoted to religion. The revenue of the archbishop is 18,420 sterling. Mexico is the most populous city of the new world: it is richly supplied with roots and fruits of every sort: these roots are cultivated on chinampas, or floating gardens, invented by the Indians. The soil is gradually purified from this salt, by washing it with the water of the lake. The chinampas sometimes contain the cottage of the Indian, who acts as guard for a group of floating gardens. The valley of Tenochtitlan possesses two sources of mineral waters, which contain carbonic acid, sulphate of soda and lime, and muriate of soda. From the position of the city of Mexico, surrounded as it is by lakes, they have been frequently inundated, notwithstanding the dykes that were constructed to prevent that calamity; these having been found ineffectual, they adopted the European mode of evading by canals, which, after various experiments, and an immense expense, were at last in some measure found to be effective. The city is still, however, exposed to great risk, which Mr. Humboldt thinks will not be removed, till a canal is opened from lake Texcoco. There are sixteen towns and villages in the interior of Mexico. Such is the fertility of the Mexican soil, that without any extraordinary labor, the ground now under cultivation, will furnish subsistence for a population ten times as numerous. The Mexican wheat, is nearly equal to that of the United States; and twenty-four grains for one is the usual produce. In every 100 inhabitants in the city of Mexico there are 49 Spanish Creoles, 24 European Spaniards, 24 Aztec and Otomite Indians, and 25 people of mixed blood. The Europeans constitute only the 70th part of the whole population of South America. The following is the proportion of the males to females, in Mexico:

From Havanna.

A gentleman who arrived from Havanna on Sunday last, informs us, that the "expedition" which has been so long fitting out there to drive away the Carthagena pirates, was completed during his stay at that place, and had sailed on its first cruise. After being out 10 days, it returned into port again, without meeting any thing to try the "tug of war." This grand flotilla, which has been three months in preparation, consists of the Young Wasp privateer, formerly of Philadelphia, and a schooner.

Another passenger in the Good Hope politely furnished the editors with the following memorandum of arrivals, by which it will be seen that upwards of fifteen hundred slaves were imported into Havanna in less than one month!

Arrived at Havanna, 25th August, sch. Antelope, Porter, 15 days from Charlevoix, rice and beef. 10th September, British sloop of war Esk, captain Lenox, 16 days from Vera Cruz. 11th, Spanish ship Cleopatra, De Acosta, 67 days from America, with 314 slaves. 17th, H. M. brig Bermuda, capt. Pakenham, from a cruise. 4th, British brig of war Primrose, capt. Philpot, 14 days from Jamaica. 5th, Spanish brig Conquistador, Melladoes, 51 days from Africa, with 317 slaves; Spanish ship Mon Souvante, Don Diego Dario, 45 days from Africa, with 318 slaves; British sloop of war Sabine, from a cruise; and a brig and schooner from the Coast of Africa, with 550 slaves.

Extract of a letter from Inverness dated August 24.

Last night, exactly a quarter before eleven o'clock, the town of Inverness & the surrounding country was fearfully shook by one of the most awful phenomena in the dispensations of Providence, an earthquake. C. and I. were sitting chatting together after supper, when we were suddenly startled by one of the most sudden and uncommon presen- tions. I had ever felt and which instantly suggested to us the cause. I could think of nothing that could give so good an idea of what we felt, as that of a person being seated on the back of a horse when he suddenly and violently shakes himself. We flew to the street, where we found almost every inhabitant, women and children screaming, and a very considerable portion of them naked. Many flew to the fields, and there remained for the greater part of the night. Chimney tops were thrown down or damaged in every quarter of the town.

The Mason Lodge, occupied as a hotel, was rent from top to bottom, the north stack of the chimney partly thrown down—one of the coping stones, weighed I should think, from fifty to sixty pounds, was thrown to the other side of the street, a distance of not less than sixty feet. The spire of the steeple, which I think one of the handsomest in Scotland, has been seriously injured and must in part be taken down. The spire is an octagon: and within five and six feet of the top, the angles of the octagon are turned nearly to the middle of the square or flat side of the octagon immediately under. What is more won- derful than any thing attending this memorable event, notwithstanding the vast quantities of stone and bricks that have been thrown from such immense heights, not one single person has received any hurt.

I have only further to remark, that I was not attended with any of those phenomena that have been said to accom- pany my earthquakes. The day has been beautiful and serene and still continued so; no agitations or raving was observable in the river; it has been frequently observed, that in countries subject to these awful visitations, the mercury sud- denly falls in the barometer: this I in- stantly attended to, but no alteration whatever took place.

ALEXANDRIA

WEDNESDAY, October 16.

Ultra Federalism.—At present the two great political parties in this country are Federalists, and ultra federalists; the last consisting mostly of leading men in the democratic party, who in practice have adopted the prominent measures of federalism, but being a hot-headed race, and every disposed to drive furiously they have carried those federal measures to an extravagant excess—for beyond what federalists, even in the time of Mr. Adams's administration, ever dreamt of.

This is a point too clear to admit of denial or dispute. Every measure which federalism was blamed for, democracy has taken up, and has carried it far beyond the true mark: has corrupted it by running it into a狂ious extreme—verifying the old saying, that "too much of one thing is good for nothing."

Were it not for this one thing, and one thing besides, the two parties might be come identified. We might be "all Federalists, all Republicans." But there are many of us who think that federalism is a ruinous, as it clearly has done in the hands of our opponents, is well nigh as frantic as the phrenzy of old democracy itself. Though we love and revere the federalism of the old school, we cannot for the life of us approve the wild ex- cesses to which it is now carried. If our political opponents would measure back their steps at least half way, they would be brought to the point at which fede- ralism stood in Mr. Adam's time, when it was stretched quite as far as it would bear. But unless, in this manner, they meet us half way, we shall find it impos- sible to unite with them.

Moreover, as hinted above, there is in the way, one thing besides: and that is, that the ultra federalists have not the ho- nesty, which the genuine federalists were well known to have had. The latter, to wit, Hamilton and the other members of the cabinet, were men of office quite as poor as they went in: notwithstanding that, in those times and in their official situations, there were as many ways and means of enrichment, as for the most part there have been since. They might for instance, have derived immense personal advantages to themselves from the establishment of the funding system; but so they did not. Not such has been the conduct of the ultra federalists. Men of their own party being witnesses, they are guilty of gain, and lovers of "filthy lucre," in an almost unexampled degree, so that however poor they go into office, they presently become fat and sleek.

From what has been said two things would seem to follow, as essentially necessary for effecting a happy union of the parties; the one is, that the democrats or republicans by name, but ultra federalists

in practice, should cease to be federalists overmuch or outrageously; and the other that they should acquire to themselves a modicum of that precious commodity called Honesty, which has been so conspic- uous in the genuine federalists in all their betrustments.

Daily Ad.

Governor Brooks, of Massachusetts, has issued his Proclamation, recommending Thursday, the 28th day of November, as a day of Public thanksgiving & prayer; which day, the governor observes, "I have thought fit to appoint throughout this Commonwealth, as a day of Praise and Thanksgiving to God, for the renewed and multiplied instances of his providential care and beneficence they have experienced in the course of the last year. And the people of all religious denominations are invited, and earnestly requested, to assemble on that day, conformably to the example of our fathers, in their respective places of public worship, gratefully and devoutly to acknowledge the Divine favor and munificence: In that the su- preme Disposer of our destinies and of all events, has preserved our lives, and so far prospered our agriculture and fisheries as to afford the cheering hope of a competent supply of the necessities of life. That the people have so generally been blessed with health in their habita- tions, and large measures of social and individual happiness: that our consti- tutions of government, and our civil and religious privileges are continued to us, and that he has guided our nation in the way of peace.

And while with one voice we rever- ently offer to the God of our fathers, & the fountain of all good, the sacrifice of thanksgiving, may be suitably affected with a consciousness of our own demerit, and to an ingenuous confession of our ingratitude to our Heavenly Benefactor, of listlessness to our duty, and frequent violations of it, let us add fervent and sincere, as well as united supplications to the Throne of Grace, for the remission of all our transgressions, upon the terms of the Gospel, as revealed and offered to us by Jesus Christ, who has once appeared to put away sin by one offering, the sacrifice of himself: and that we, being made partakers of the light and hope of the Gospel, may be filled with the fruits of righteousness: with that wisdom that is pure, peaceable and gentle, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocri- cy: That God will be pleased to pre- serve us from the pestilence that walks in darkness, and from the destruc- tion that wasteth at noon day: That He will bless and prosper all the lawful en- terprises and the daily secular employ- ments of the people: That He will have mercy on the poor and supply them with bread: giving them with patience and resignation under the Divine allot- ments: That He will inspire the ad- vent with sentiments of benevolence and liberality, and make them rich in works of charity and benevolence: That he will vouchsafe to regard with his special favour, the interest of Religion, and grant to the Christian Church a suc- cection of able and faithful teachers: That he will be pleased to take our nation into his most holy keeping, and exalt it by righteousness: That he will bless the President of the United States, guide the deliberations of the National and State Legislature, and continue peace in our borders. That he will preserve the union of the States, and delight to build us up, and make us a virtuous and happy people: That he will smile upon and render eminently useful our Uni- versity and Colleges: bless our schools, and guide with tokens of his parental kindness, the rising generations: That he will graciously condescend to succeed and prosper the efforts of all societies and individuals, designed and adapted to mitigate the evils incident to human life—to strengthen and confirm the principles of social order—to enlarge & multiply the means of attaining moral and intellectual excellence, to discontinue and suppress vice—to place the Bible in the hands of the poor and needy and to diffuse the knowledge of the sacred Scrip- tures among all the unchristian and idolatrous nations of the world; and that the benign religion of the Prince of Peace, being universally disseminated through the earth, may take deep root in the human heart, and become exclusively the religion of man."

Franklin, Ten. Sept. 26.

We are informed by Major Eastland, from the Chickasaw nation, that General Jackson, with the other commissioners, had completed the treaty with the differ- ent Indian tribes in a manner perhaps the best calculated to promote the general weal of the government, as well as to settle all existing animosities or differences between the different Indian nations as well as between them and the U. States. For all lands lying between the mouth of Bear creek and Fort Deposit, on the north side of the Tennessee river, the commissioners for the United States have agreed to give $80,000, payable in ten annual installments; and for the es- tablishment of General Coffee's line with the no session of the land included therein, they have also agreed to give $120,000 payable also in ten annual instal- ments.
